PREFACE TO THE ONE HUNDRED AND SECOND VOLUME OF THE NEW YORK CITY DIRECTORY, 1786-1888.

THIS volume is the second one of the second century of our existence. In 1786 the population of our city numbered 23,614, and Volume No. 1, 1786, contained 846 names of the residents of this city at that time. Our 102d volume gives the names and addresses of 335,228 people living in this great city, and, from the experience gained in canvassing this city for more than a century, we can safely say that the present resident population of the City of New York is fully 1,676,140. Our floating population—the strangers visiting the city for business and pleasure (many remaining for months at a time), the great daily ebb and flow from the surrounding cities, towns, and villages—we estimate at fully 400,000 people. Taking a fair average, we have, each day of the year, about 2,000,000 persons within the limits of Manhattan Island. For our canvassing purposes the city is divided into 733 districts, and when in full operation we employ 500 persons in canvassing, compiling, and printing the information we gather for the public. In this cosmopolitan city, where changes of residence by the hundred are taking place daily, where every nationality of the civilized world has a greater or less representation, where each nationality uses, in a great degree, their native language, if the readers will stop to think they can easily imagine the great difficulties to be overcome, 1st, in obtaining canvassers to properly canvass this heterogeneous population; 2d, to get the names properly spelled and compiled. We find innumerable difficulties in obtaining the names of residents in the large flat-houses:

in properly getting the names of householders, which we frequently are obliged to receive from servants (and they are French, German, Irish, Italian, Bohemian, and so on, through the whole category of nationalities), with all the differences of spelling and pronunciation—all this is no easy task. Yet, with the statistical information in our archives, with the assistance of trained, intelligent, educated men, by comparing, checking, and counterchecking, by re-canvassing where we have any doubt, by our corps of canvassing experts, and at vast expense, we produce a directory that is not equalled for accuracy by any work of the kind known to us—and this is the work we offer for your approval.

"PERFECT" BRICK-SET RANGE.

1888 "PERFECT" 1888
Fire-Place Heaters,

Will heat larger rooms. More easily managed.

Has greater heating capacity than any Room Heater.

The cold winters of from 1882 to 1888 have demonstrated this fact in hundreds of cases.

The only Heater conforming with the present style of interior architecture and household ornamentation.

Owing to its construction it heats powerfully below and above, by creating a circulation of warm air, in addition to the large direct radiation surfaces. Is larger, has greater heating capacity, will do more work, will last longer, will use less fuel, and is more easily managed, than any Heater ever introduced.
